The Adventures of Hopper

The little rabbit, Hopper, explores the world outside his meadow. He hops through the book narrowly escaping some harrowing situations.

This book draws young readers into the story with moveable pieces. Literacy Support Symbols are paired with the text so young children or those children struggling with reading can read independently. Sturdy pages are moisture proof, velcro and sliders withstand repeated use, and the 5 inch x 7 inch size is perfect for small hands. Written by a speech/language pathologist. A must for every library!

Available in a bundled series of 5 interactive board books; save $10:

Interactive Reading Books

6 interactive reading books encourage language development, reading, direction following and fine motor skills.

The 7 step sequence begins by matching picture-to-picture and ends with reading sentences aloud. Each book has removable pictures that correspond to easy-to-read text. Students place the pictures to match story content. Developed by Joan Green, former Special Education Teacher of the Year and an expert in autism. The six books are sold individually or as a 6 book set.

I Go to School introduces activities and vocabulary of a typical school day. Action! focuses on verbs and pronouns in a who, what, where format. Things I Do at Home covers breakfast, lunch, play time, TV, and family stuff. I Have Feelings, Too! is a book of emotions for older children, teens and adults. What Happened and Why? encourages readers to make inferences about the pictures. Who's on First? challenges the student to understand the sequence of events, like "first, next and last."
